THE Journey

From The Heart

Greetings, Dear Friends!

OK, where are you right now? Are you standing or sitting? Do you have a few moments to think? If not, put this down and come back to read the rest when you can relax and just read, agreed?

OK, I'm trusting you. I'm trusting you are now in a comfortable position to just relax and read. Why is this important to me? Glance up and read the title of this page that I write each month. See what it is? Yes, it's titled: "From The Heart." It's my heart talk to you each month. I really want you to hear me.

While I haven't had the blessing to meet each one of you who reads this, the closest I can get is this article that I send to you each month. If I had my preference and unlimited time, I'd sit down with you, with a warm drink in hand, and I'd look you in the eyes and I'd say, "Talk to me. What is on your heart?" If you let me listen, I would want you to give me real talk about real life.

Talk about real life, aren't you in the midst of that? Some of the things we'd talk about and I'd love to hear might include discussion of some of these questions: You survived!! How were your holidays different? You made it through 2015. What do you see differently now? What are you concerned about in 2016? What are you hopeful for in 2016? What are you learning as you walk through the grief?

What are you learning as you walk through the grief? That question has so many angles to navigate. Did you know that you are on an extreme learning pathway? Some days it may feel like you are barely surviving, let alone learning. But you are!

One of the blessings of my work is that I get to walk alongside some really wonderful people who are figuring out some of the darkest times of their lives. It's plain yuk some days! But I learn from you each time I get the joy to spend time with you. As we gather this month, this New Year, we will be talking about the "School of Grief." All are enrolled, and somewhere in the learning process. I see you help each other find encouragement and hope. Some of the biggest take-aways are: You are not alone; and you are very normal in your feelings!

And guess what? I'm excited to give you a new tool this month. I believe it will help simplify good communication in a very practical way. I'm anxious to get your feedback. So come...we welcome you! We'll gather at tables, with warm drink in hand, and have real talk about real life. Thanks in advance for coming and letting my life be blessed by your honest, open hearts as we do real life together! This month....that what's From my Heart to Yours! Thanks for listening...

Blessings,

Healing Thought

“The mind has a dumb sense of vast loss – that is all. It will take the mind and memory months, and possibly years, to gather the details and know the whole extent of the loss.”
